

Publicworks Office presents
5 Cents: A local/express initiative

What do you do with those odd amounts that are left when you buy a few rides at a time and get some "bonus" amount that doesn't even equal a whole number of rides?

Why is it so easy to get your deposit back from a bottle or can return, but you can't get your own money off a Metrocard?

The MTA might have a $800 million deficit but we want to help riders close their own budget gap—five cents at a time. We're riding the 4 train from Woodlawn to Crown Heights so you can trade your almost-empty Metrocard for cash (five cents to be exact). Of course we will also take empty bottles and cans—just look for the 5 Cents street team.

Not sure where to find us? Follow us at twitter.com/worksoffice for stop-by-stop updates.

Forgot your empty card at home? Bring it this Friday to the Payday Party, May 21 2010, from 6-8 pm at the T.W.O. storefront (156 William Street near the Fulton Street station). We'll give you a nickel and then it's up to you...to shake that asset!

Publicworks Office presents
5 Cents: A local/express initiative

What do you do with those odd amounts that are left when you buy a few rides at a time and get some "bonus" amount that doesn't even equal a whole number of rides?

Why is it so easy to get your deposit back from a bottle or can return, but you can't get your own money off a Metrocard?

The MTA might have a $800 million deficit but we want to help riders close their own budget gap—five cents at a time. We're riding the 4 train from Woodlawn to Crown Heights so you can trade your almost-empty Metrocard for cash (five cents to be exact). Of course we will also take empty bottles and cans—just look for the 5 Cents street team.

Not sure where to find us? Follow us at twitter.com/worksoffice for stop-by-stop updates.

Forgot your empty card at home? Bring it this Friday to the Payday Party, May 21 2010, from 6-8 pm at the T.W.O. storefront (156 William Street near the Fulton Street station). We'll give you a nickel and then it's up to you...to shake that asset!

Publicworks Office presents
5 Cents: A local/express initiative

What do you do with those odd amounts that are left when you buy a few rides at a time and get some "bonus" amount that doesn't even equal a whole number of rides?

Why is it so easy to get your deposit back from a bottle or can return, but you can't get your own money off a Metrocard?

The MTA might have a $800 million deficit but we want to help riders close their own budget gap—five cents at a time. We're riding the 4 train from Woodlawn to Crown Heights so you can trade your almost-empty Metrocard for cash (five cents to be exact). Of course we will also take empty bottles and cans—just look for the 5 Cent streets team.

Not sure where to find us? Follow us at twitter.com/worksoffice for stop-by-stop updates.

Forgot your empty card at home? Bring it this Friday to the Payday Party, May 21 2010, from 6-8 pm at the T.W.O. storefront (156 William Street near the Fulton Street station). We'll give you a nickel and then it's up to you...to shake that asset!

Publicworks Office presents
5 Cents: A local/express initiative

What do you do with those odd amounts that are left when you buy a few rides at a time and get some "bonus" amount that doesn't even equal a whole number of rides?

Why is it so easy to get your deposit back from a bottle or can return, but you can't get your own money off a Metrocard?

The MTA might have a $800 million deficit but we want to help riders close their own budget gap—five cents at a time. We're riding the 4 train from Woodlawn to Crown Heights so you can trade your almost-empty Metrocard for cash (five cents to be exact). Of course we will also take empty bottles and cans—just look for the 5 Cents street team.

Not sure where to find us? Follow us at twitter.com/worksoffice for stop-by-stop updates.

Forgot your empty card at home? Bring it this Friday to the Payday Party, May 21 2010, from 6-8 pm at the T.W.O. storefront (156 William Street near the Fulton Street station). We'll give you a nickel and then it's up to you...to shake that asset!

5¢

5¢

5¢

5¢

